Serving the interests of investors

As such, attendees must adhere to all COVID-19 safety measures put in place by SIAA, the venue and either or both of the Australian Government and the respective state government. Attendees also acknowledge that these procedures may be changed at any time in accordance with the latest health advice from either or both of the Australian Government and the respective state government.

Vaccination status

SIAA will follow the latest health advice from either or both of the Australian Government and the respective state government.

If at the time vaccinations are required, attendees will be required to be vaccinated and event staff may be required to check attendees' vaccination status on arrival at the event.

Masks

SIAA and the venue will follow the latest health advice from either or both of the Australian Government and the respective state government. If at the time masks are mandated, attendees will be required to wear a mask. If masks are not mandated, attendees may choose to wear a mask at their discretion.

Social distancing

The venue will adhere to the latest health advice from either or both of the Australian Government and the respective state government.

Experiencing symptoms of illness

SIAA and the venue will expect attendees to follow the latest health advice if they are feeling unwell. However, for the comfort of other guests, attendees who are suffering from cold or flu-like symptoms (such as coughing or sneezing) should reconsider their attendance at the event. If this is the case, please contact the SIAA team to discuss your ticket refund or replacement options.

We appreciate your cooperation in ensuring we can deliver a safe event for our industry.
